ting Fire to Her Clothing.

Pittston, Pa., Nov. 21.—Tired and weary of the trials and tribulations of this life and not being the possessor of a happy disposition, Mrs. George Roberts, aged forty-five years, attempted self-destruction at her home in Old Forge Tuesday night.

Brooding over the hamiliation she suffered in consequence of a quarrel she had with a neighbor during the day and desiring to avoid any further quarrels Mrs. Roberts set fire to her clothes, hoping thereby to end all. The time selected for the commission of the deed was most favorable, there being nobody in the house at the time. Mr. Roberts and the children had gone out of the house but a short time, when the desperate woman thrust her dress into the grate of the stove. It Is Deposited With the Clerk of Habeas Corpus Case of Dr. Geo. A. Whitten Before Supreme Court.

> Unusual Combination of Circum stances in a Colebrated Con-necticut Marder Case,

> The habeas corpus case of Dr. George A. Whitten vs. Charles A. Tombinson, sherlift of New Haven county, Conn., now before the United States Supreme Court, presents an unusual combination of circumsents of the complex stances, and a most novel question for the decision of the court.

> The facts, as disclosed by the records and pleading of counsel, are these: Dr. Whitten, while a resident of New Haven, was tried by a local court upon the charge of murder in the second degree, and dis-charged. He remained in New Haven for a long time afterward, during, at least, two sessions of the grand jury, and then reyear 1894.

secure it, but failed, probably because of the early laws of Virginia, which direct that it must remain at Fairfax. Washington's other writings have been gathered and com-piled, and are now stored away in the ar-In January, 1895, he was arrested and In January, 1895, he was arrested and extradited from the State of Massachasetts upon the demand of the governor of Connecticut, who alleged that an indictment had been found by the grand jury of New Haven county against him for the crime of murder. After being returned to New Haven, he was admitted to ball January 17, 1895, pending his appearance before the superior court of New Haven county. The bond was fixed at $5,000, and Lucius B. Herman became surety thereon.

In March, Herman, fearing that his principal intended to abscend, surrendered Whiteleys and the surrendered whiteleys are the superior of the superior of the superior of the superior of the surrendered whiteleys are superior of the superior of the superior of the surrendered whiteleys are superior of the supe piled, and are now stored away in the arthire sortage department. No unusual care has ever been taken to priserve the will,

and twice it has come near being destroyed,
once by the old courthouse catching fire, and again when some relic-hunter came within an ace of stealing it.

Efforts were made at the time of the Philadelphia Centennial and previous to the World's Fair to secure the paper for exhibition, but the clerk declined to allow it to go out of his possession.

Fairfax Court House is a small village of 350 inhabitants, and since the days when cipal intended to abscord, surrendered Whit-ten to the custody of the sheriff, a mit-timus for his confinement being issued by John S. Fowler, justice of the peace.

Farrax Court House is a small village of 350 inhabitants, and since the days when Mount Vernon cameinto Washington shands it has remained the county seat of Fairfax County. The old court house and the cierk's office are upward of 100 years old, and have all the characteristics of buildings of that period. An ordinary iron safe holds the will, and any interested person canses it who are John 8. Fowler, justice of the peace.

Thereupon Whitten sued in the district court of the United States for his release from custody, in his petition averring that no indictment was ever found against him by any grand jury in Connecticut; that any pretended indictment was found by mistake or misconception, and that at the time of his extradition from Massachusetts he was not a fugitive from justice from Connecticut. and any interested person causee it who ap-plies to the obliging clerk. A few years ago a woodenbox twelveinchessquare, of walnut, with the top fitted with a glass pane, was made, and in this the will was deposited. No one has ever opened it since then, and moone will be allowed to by the present cierk.

The will years are was torn practically not a fugitive from justice from Connecticut.

Judge Townsend refused to release Whitten, and from that decision Whitten appealed to the supreme court. The ground of the judge's action was that the questions raised by Whitten had not been passed upon by the highest courts of the State, and until they had been so passed upon the Federal courts should not undertake to say that he was illegally deprived of his liberty. He might obtain all the protection to which he was entitled in the courts of the State.

In his argument in favor of the release of Whitten, his counsel, Mr. W. H. Baker, asserts that his client is held in custody upon a process that is void; that he was illegally extradited from Massachusetts, by fraudulent imposition upon the author-will be allowed to by the present cierk.

The will, years ago, was torn practically in two, but every piece is retained and pasted carefully together. Washington's hand is as bold in his will as in other of his early papers, and the tak is as black as though it were used a month ago.

The document consists of about one dozen pages the size of legal cap of the present day, exclusive of appendices, in which Washington gives a detailed statement of every article he possessed, down to calves and sheep.

His entire personal estate at the time his will was made is put dwn at about $532,000, which probably made him the richooo, which probably made him the richest man in the State at that time. His belongings consisted of bonds, stocks, to-bacco, large numbers of cattle, sheep and licraes, together with his vast estate, practically all of which he willed to Mrs. Washby fraudulent imposition upon the author-ities of that State; that, in the cases cited by Judge Townsend in support of his re-fusal to release Whitten, the parties were properly in the custody of the State officials; and that Whitten was entitled to appeal to the Federal court, being a res-ident of another State, and the State of The present clerk of the county says that

The present clerk of the county says that few people ask to see the will, as they believe it is in Washington city. Not only the will, but other rare papers of Washington, deeds, tax receipts, and State papers, are also held by the clerk.

One great folio alone contains entries regarding Washington's transactions with the county officers, many of which show that he had given so many hogsheads of tobacco in payment of certain taxes. Tilton E. Doolittle, states attorney Mr. Titton E. Doomtie, states attorney for New Haven county, contends that the only questions receivable by the Supreme Court are such as are raised by the record, the petition, the return, and the motion to quash; that there is an indictment pending against Whitten in Connecticut, and that he is being held for sufficient cause; that, in the absence of a CIVIL SERVICE REFORM LEAGUE. necticut, and that he is being held for suf-ficient cause; that, in the absence of a claim by Whitten that he had been denied protection in the State courts, the Federal court had no jurisdiction; that the pre-sumption is that the governor of Massa-chusetts surrendered Whitten upon suf-ficient evidence, that he was a fugilive from justice.

FOUGHT WITH A CATAMOUNT Party of Hunters Have a Thrilling E:

perience in Northern Pennsylvania. Milford, Pa., Nov. 21.—County Superintendent of Public Instruction George Saw-yer, Sol Hazelton, Howard Allen and the Henderson brothers went to Yahoop Creek, two miles from Mill Rift, for a hunt. Their dogs started a catamount, which came for Mr. Sawyer, so completely surprising him that he was terror-stricken. The animal whirled around him twice in a circle, ut-whired around him twee in a circle, ut-tering unearthly yells.

Sawyer finally got in two shots, which only served to excite the heast to madness. Jumping on one of the dogs, the catamount killed it instantly. The other hunters were drawn to the spot, and the wildest made for them, scratching and clawing them severely. In the meantime another dog was killed and a prize dog seriously wounded.

Sawyer obtained a third shot, which mor-tally wounded the wildeat. Several of the hunters were quite severely bruised and scratched in the light

QUESTIONS FOR TAX-PAYERS

Do you think that the District should be bonded to pay for a new system of sewerage and for street extenston and improvements? Do you think that, should a bond bill pass, any of the money realized from the sale of these bonds should be expended in improving private real estate holdings outside the city proper and remote from the great body of tax-payers?
